A True Story of an Unexpected Miracle and an Equally Unexpected Life
Afterwards

Catherine Ashenfelter

Catherine Ashenfelter suffered from M.E. (Myalgic Encephalomyelitis) for nearly 20 years. Her mobility became so restricted that she became a wheelchair user and was assessed as over 80% disabled by the Department of Social Security.

One day in 1997, she received an unexpected healing miracle after a simple prayer. The M.E. instantly and completely went; so far (15 years on), it has not returned. Her GP acknowledged the event as a miracle. It would change Catherine's life and that of her husband, John, forever.

But Catherine feels that the miracle served to prepare her and John for more suffering, albeit of a different kind; a kind whereby only a previous miracle could help in keeping faith with God.

Catherine writes honestly, descriptively and with humour. The book also touches on The Grace Charity for M.E., a charity which has been founded directly from the miracle.
